Kawameeh Middle School students in Richard Grennor's music classes entertained guests on drums purchased with a grant from the Township of Union Education Foundation on May 9, 2012 at the Education Foundation's spring reception at Liberty Hall, Union.

On May 9, teachers who received grants from the Township of Union Education Foundation were honored at a reception at Liberty Hall.

The following teachers have received grants for the 2012-2013 school year: Suzanne Licks, fourth grade teacher at Livingston School, for raising trout in a special tank in the school; Karen Balczyk and Kelly Higgins, third grade teachers at Connecticut Farms School for Kindle Fires, to extend education beyond the classroom walls; Francesca Stanco at Hannah Caldwell School for an iPad to use with autistic students; Jennifer McCartney, English teacher at Burnet Middle School, for a special computer program to help students learn grammar and writing skills; Christine Boris and her team from Burnet Middle School for copies of the book "Chasing Vermeer" to use as part of an interdisciplinary study; Nicole Toccaceli, English teacher at Kawameeh Middle School for Kindles to use in a program called "E Readers for Our Readers," Tyler Kneidl, Union High School physics teacher, for a grant for a computer program to use technology to gain a fundamental understanding of physics; Nicole Mortellito, world language teacher at Union High School, for iPads to be used in conjunction with learning world languages, and Adam Raffaele, to expand the outdoor environmental classroom planned at Union High School.
